

Private Facts for Destiny

Destiny comes to your office and asks you to negotiate a settlement with Moonpennies based on their negligent coffee preparation. Destiny would like to recover damages for medical bills, pain and suffering, loss of a possible magazine contract, and embarrassment. The medical bills totaled $20,000. Although Density had not discussed with the scouts the amount she would be paid to model for them, many dancers she works with make $150,000 per magazine shoot. She thinks she would be able to get more because she is in higher demand at Monkey-Bones and is a much more “talented” dancer.

Destiny is concerned that she will have a hard time finding a judge that will take this suit seriously. She has many pending lawsuits against former clients in the district so many of the judges know of her and she is a bit of a courthouse joke. In addition to her sexual harassment suit, she also has pending lawsuits against other coffee shops because she occasionally goes to these shops and orders drinks that usually contain cinnamon in hopes of them messing up her order. In this case however, she really did not mean to order a drink with cinnamon, but did in her rush to get to work. In spite of this, she claims that if it were not for Tard-Lee’s incompetence of pouring nearly a whole shaker of cinnamon in her drink, she would not have had the reaction that she did.

In addition to the coffee, Destiny also ate a bucket full of hot wings before the show. She is allergic to blue cheese as well as cinnamon. However, she is sure that she did not eat any blue cheese and is positive that the cinnamon was the reason for her reaction.

Destiny is hoping to settle this suit quickly. She owes loan sharks $350,000 due to her Keno gambling addiction, which we can all sympathize with. If possible, she would like to settle for more than this amount so that she can pay them back.
